U.S. Visa Information

Travel to the U.S. from all countries not participating in the Visa Waiver Program does require a Visa. The United States has instituted tighter visa requirements for non-immigrant applicants. This may increase the time it takes to process your visa application. Use the information in these pages to help prepare for the process and begin your visa application well in advance of your travel dates. Visa applications in some countries can take as long as two to three months. You can check here to see visa wait times by country.

Invitation letters to IWF 2024 for your visa application can be requested as part of the online registration process.

Use the U.S. Embassy/Consulate website by country to find the consulate/embassy in your country to apply for a visa and find detailed information about applying for a visa from your country of origin.

Interview tips:

- Bring your letter of invitation and any other materials you have received from IWF (promotional pieces, registration materials, Technical Conference information, etc.) to your interview. This helps to show IWF is a legitimate business event.
- Show proof of "strong ties" that bind you to your country of residence. The consular officers conducting visa interviews look for proof that you will return to your country. Evidence of "strong ties" includes proof of business ownership or employment, social and family relationships.
- If you have traveled to the U.S. previously, provide documentation demonstrating that you returned to your country on time (reservation receipts, airline boarding pass, passport stamps, etc.) Show proof that you returned within the time frame of a previous visa. Or materials that show you attended a business conference or meeting.
- Interviews are generally very short in length. Questions focus on your travel plans and your ties to your home country ensuring your return. Being as prepared as possible improves your likelihood of being approved.
- Remember, wait times for interviews can be very long. Begin the process as soon as possible and schedule an interview immediately upon registering and receiving your letter of invitation.
